Aventure to Sponsor AMC Safety Wiring Contest at MRO AMERICAS 2015

Aventure Aviation is the proud sponsor of the Aerospace Maintenance Competition's (AMC) Safety Wiring event. The competition will take place at Aviation Week's MRO AMERICAS 2015, April 14-16 in Miami, Florida at the Miami Beach Convention Center.

According to the AMC website, the safety wiring "event will test each participant's skill and speed while accomplishing a series of safety wire patterns."

Safety wiring prevents fasteners from loosening or falling out due to vibration. A wire is threaded through a hole in a fastener and twisted and then typically anchored to another fastener.

The AMC gives aviation industry technicians the opportunity to use their skills to compete against their peers in a series of competitions. Participants include students enrolled in aviation technical schools, certified Aircraft Maintenance Technicians and Engineers, and technicians from the Armed Forces of several countries, as well as uncertified Aircraft Technicians and Aircraft Engineers employed with a Maintenance Repair and Overhaul (MRO) or Original Equipment Manufacturing (OEM) company.

"As an aircraft parts supplier to the aviation industry, Aventure Aviation recognizes the importance of the aviation technicians who install these parts," said Melissa Coleman-Grina, Senior Director of Business Development at Aventure Aviation. "Even under adverse weather conditions, aviation technicians tirelessly demonstrate their responsibility for the safety of the traveling passengers in the air. Their dedication guarantees that passengers and freight arrive safely on time."

"AMC's competition recognizes the best technicians in the industry, providing professionals and students with an opportunity to network with the brightest individuals in the field and utilize the most technologically advanced systems," Coleman-Grina said. "Aventure Aviation is proud to support AMC's efforts in bringing attention to this noble profession."
